THE result so far of the canvass of the House, now being made by the NATIONAL REPUBLICAN, is a most gratifying one. Of nearly two hundred members whose opin ions are in our possession, one hundred and twelve favor either free sugar or a reduction of the duty to such an extent that it will be merely nominal. On the reform of the internal revenue laws, so far as they affect tobacco, the feeling is very firm, one bundred and thirty-five members having pledged themselves to support any reasonable measure having the relief of that article for its end and alm.

Dunino the past few days important meetings have been held in different parts of the country to consider the action to be taken in arousing public interest and helping to frame legislation on the subject of coast defenses. The legislative committee of the Real Estate Exchange of New York has appointed a committee of three to bring about a co-operation of all representative commercial bodies in the city of New York to as to make an impression upon Congress "which will result in immediate the only action on the part of the legislative poration.

branch of the national government. On Saturday last the executive committee of the Coast Defense Association of the const cities of the south issued a circular recommending that a convention be held at De Fuelak Springs, Fla., on Feb. 8 of this year, to take counsel as to the best method of securing protection of our coast, based upon modern requirements. The governors and congressional delegations of all the southern states have been lavited, and the movement has already assumed large pro-portions. When New York city and the othern states combine there is bound to

to be important work done somewhere. Under Which King, Bayaria?

Since the memorable conflict on that summer day in 1870 when Bavarian troops, whose neutrality was so strongly relied upon by Napoleon III, were hurled with such furious impetuosity upon the French forces at Gravelotte, the Bavarian kingdom has occupied, next to Prussla, the most important position in the political history of Germany. It was the Wagner-stricken Ludwig — destined to self-inflicted death—who at the meeting of kings and princes at Versailles propthat William of Prussia should be elected emperor of Germany. Since that time we have heard more of Ludwig's musical than of his military distinction, but the country whose finances he mismanaged for years with such signal ability maintains her lofty dace among the defenders of Bismarck's empire. Her future career will be watched with interest by all who keep any count of European events, and her present position deserves a passing notice

As will be remembered, when Ludwig drowned bimself last summer in that lonely orthern lake his younger brother succeeded to the nominal sovereignty. Otto, the new king, suffers from a mental affliction more erious than that of his deceased brother, and there never has been a particle of hope for his deliverance from driveling idlocy. By concurrence of both houses of parlia ment it was agreed that Prince Luitpold, uncle of King Otto, should be proclaimed Some months ago it was an regent. ounced that Luitpold had had an interview with Emperor William and Bismarck in reference to the state of Bavarian affairs, and to his own right to the kingdom in place of an idiot king who reigned but did not rule. The matter dropped for a time, but from yesterday's cable dispatches we learn that new negotiations on the same subject are now pro-ceeding. Baron Crailsheim, Bavarian minlater for foreign affairs, arrived in Berlin on Monday with the ostensible mission of tendering the sympathy of his master and country to the aged kalser, who is supposed to be sickened nigh unto death by the defeat of his blood-and-irony chancellor's army measure in the reichstag. This movement clearly signifies that Bavaria, under Regent Luitpold, is solidly with Prussia under all probable complica tions, and, considering the religious differ ences of the countries, this prompt support of Bayaria is of the utmost importance to Prussia in face of the coming elections, if not in face of an immediate war. Bayaria has a well equipped army of 55,000 men, absolutely at the disposal of the empire. She sends, next to Prussia, the largest number of representatives to the bundesrath and the reichstag, and has a opulation of five and a quarter millions. In return for this support Luitpold is not udisposed to accept help from Russia, and the cable dispatch quotes from the semiofficial Tageblatt that Baron Crailsheim's mission "includes the settlement of a plan which was discussed on the occasion of the regent's recent visit to Berlin to declare Luitpold King of Bavaria."

This action on part of Bavaria will no doubt be generally followed by the other German states which participated in the struggles and conquests of 1870, and there little room for regarding the words o Bismarck as anything but perfectly sincerwhen he said last week that, whatever the existing parliament might do, he should have his septennial army bill passed anyhow.

The President on the Proposed Exhibi-

In reply to a memorial of the commission relating to the centennial celebration of the adoption of the federal constitution, in which the memorialists recommend that such celebration shall take place on Sept. 17. 1889, in the city of Philadelphia, President Cleveland has expressed himself strongly in favor of some such movement, but is careful not to commit himself to any special time or locality. In another column the report of the presidential nessage will be found in full, and, remem bering that other arrangements have been made for celebrating the great event specified, we would recommend for the serious consideration of our friends in the City of Brotherly Love the concluding sentence of the address, which, we may add, is very long and very weighty: "While stating," says the President, "the great interest I have in the renewed examination by the American people of the historical foundation of their government. I do not feel war-ranted in discriminating in favor of or against the proposition to select one day o place in preference to all others, and there fore content myself with conveying to Congress these expressions of popular feeling and interest upon the subject, hoping that in a spirit of patriotic co-operation, rather than of local competition, fitting means may be enacted by Congress which will give the amplest opportunity all over these United States for the manifestation of the affection and confidence of a free and mighty nation in the institutions of a government of which they are the fortunate inheritors. and under which unexampled prosperity has been enjoyed by all classes and conditions of our social system."

Duning the last Congress, when the enty with the Nicaraguan government was under discussion, it was strenuously urged by many senators that it would be unwise and unsafe to commit the construction of the canal to any corporation or individuals. It was claimed that the work hould be done by our government itself, and should be owned and controlled by it slone. To this end the administration had perfected the treaty which, in terms, provided for the ownership in fee by our government of the strip of land across the isthmus through which it was intended the caual should run. It was by a very close vote that the treaty was de-If we mistake not several of the members of the present committee on foreign relations of the Senate strongly advocated the ratification of the treaty, and opposed committing the work to private capitalists. We cannot understand why this view is now so radically changed. It s now proposed not only to allow the work to be done by private parties, but also to charter a corporation which has no concession from the government of Nicaragua authorizing the construction of the caual. What guarantee have we that this corporation will ever secure a satisfactory couces-

sion? Absolutely none.
We can hardly think that the Senate will grant a charter to a company possessing no concession rights, and then seek to burden the administration with an effort to secure for such company, by treaty or otherwise, rights, the existence of which should form the only reasonable ground for is incor-

The Multicharge Cannon

The Multicharge Caunon.

[Releantific American, Jan. 8.]

Col. Haskell asks Congress for an appropriation for the further test of the multicharge gun, with the expectation of furnishing a cannon that will beat the world. The trials of the Haskell gun at Sandy Hook developed the fact that his 6 inch gun, of poor metal, with a projectile of 111 pounds and powder 116 pounds, showing a pressure of 25,000 pounds at the fourth pocket, had a greater range and penetration than a Krupp 11 inch breech-loading gun, of best steel, which showed an initial pressure of 40,829 pounds per square inch, projectile 700, powder 251 pounds. The contract is great, and the results established by the trials are sufficient to warrant the construction of additional Haskell guns of best material and workmanship for further experiments. We believe no gun of a power equal to Haskell's, size considered, has ever been produced in this or any other country. If properly made and used, the weapon promises to surpass all others. It is, moreover, a purely American gun, and its further development should be liberally encouraged. The novelty consists in attaching to the barrel of the gun, at intervals along its length, a series of exterior powder nockets that communicate with the interior of the barrel. The ball is started from the breech by a moderate charge of powder to the usual manner; when the ball passes beyond the first pocket, the burning powder first the charge contained in the pocket, and its pressure behind the projectile. The aggregate pressure of the whole powder contributes successively to add a new pressure behind the projectile, which, consequently, takes a higher velocity and has more power than the ordinary single charge gun. The theory of the darmy and navy officers sneer at it. Nevertheless, we trust Congress will grant a liberal appropriation for the horough testing of the new arm, and thus help in showing what home genius can accomplish. Everybody laughed at Ericsson's first little raft, with its iron-cased hogshead on deek. Bu Musin, the great violus virtuoss, will be heard in three selections at the Wednesda
